Atlanta Hawks

The Atlanta Hawks have been on a downward trajectory since getting to the Eastern Conference Finals for the 2020-21 season. The 2023-24 season represented a big change for Atlanta as head coach Quin Snyder got his first full season with the team. However, it didn't lead to much success as the Hawks were bad enough to earn the No. 1 pick in the 2024 NBA Draft, which they used on Zaccharie Risacher, who didn't look great in Summer League. This offseason, there were ample trade rumors about Trae Young and Dejounte Murray. The team was able to send Murray to the New Orleans Pelicans but they couldn't find a suitor for Young. They appear keen on trading the All-Star guard but interest in him seems limited around the league. The Hawks have a good coach and some talented players so they can't be counted out completely but it's hard to see them being anything better than a play-in team. If they get off to a rough start, expect the trade rumors surrounding Young to heat back up. Perhaps there are teams out there that would have more interest in him during the season than they did in the offseason. If they move on from the guard, the Hawks are certainly entering a major rebuild.

Boston Celtics

After a dominant regular season, the Boston Celtics were finally able to get over the hump and win their first championship since the 2007-08 season. What has to have fans excited is that the team was able to bring back most of the same roster from last season. The Celtics didn't face much competition in the playoffs with so many superstar injuries in the Eastern Conference, but they might still have the deepest roster in the NBA. One of the big question marks heading into last season is whether or not Joe Mazzulla was the right coach to lead them going forward. He proved he knows what he's doing last season and is now a made man after winning a championship. The Celtics are the favorites to win the championship in 2024-25 and they'll continue to be until they prove otherwise. If Jayson Tatum can't take another leap now that he finally won a championship, it's going to be very difficult to beat this team. The only thing that could derail this season is if the team takes their foot off the gas after going on a historic run last season.

Brooklyn Nets

It's been a wild few years for the Brooklyn Nets. The trio of Kyrie Irving, James Harden and Kevin Durant couldn't lead them to a championship but Mikal Bridges helped keep the team relevant. However, they decided to trade the forward to the New York Knicks this offseason, which likely means they're headed toward a rebuild. Jacque Vaughn was fired as head coach during the season and former Sacramento Kings associate head coach Jordi Fernández is taking over. This is his first time being a head coach at the NBA level so it remains to be seen how he'll do. The biggest problem for the Nets is that they just don't have a lot of talent on the roster. Ben Simmons doesn't look like he'll ever be the same player again and there's little reason to believe he'll be better in 2024-25. 22-year-old guard Cam Thomas might be their best player but he's not good enough to lead this team to the playoffs. This season is all about retooling for the Nets and building up future assets. They'll be squarely in the Cooper Flagg sweepstakes so they don't have much of an incentive to win. Don't be surprised if the Nets have the worst record in the NBA this season.

Charlotte Hornets

The Charlotte Hornets haven't won a playoff series since they returned to the NBA as the Charlotte Bobcats in 2004. That's not likely to change this season, but brighter days could be ahead. The Hornets do have some intriguing young pieces to build around. LaMelo Ball averaged 23.9 ppg last season but was limited to just 22 games due to injury. If he stays healthy, he should be an All-Star-level player. 2023 No. 2 overall pick Brandon Miller was named NBA All-Rookie First Team and averaged 17.3 points a game. He showed the potential to be an elite wing in the NBA but he'll need to further develop. The Hornets were able to land highly touted former Boston Celtics assistant Charles Lee as their head coach. He has two NBA championships as an assistant and this is his first chance being the man in charge. If a few things go right for the Hornets, they may be in the playoff mix this season. Miller looks like a future star and Ball is a top guard in the NBA if he can stay healthy. If Lee is the real deal as a head coach, Charlotte might finally be able to build a relevant program.

Chicago Bulls

The Chicago Bulls continued to be one of the most disappointing teams in the NBA last season and they may have had one of the worst off seasons of any team in the league. They made a perplexing decision by trading Alex Caruso for Josh Giddey while also losing DeMar DeRozan in free agency. The Bulls haven't won a playoff series since the 2014-15 season and it's difficult to see them even making the playoffs this season. The team does still have some talent. Nikola Vučević is averaging 18.1 ppg since joining the team. A big issue for them continues to be the health of Lonzo Ball. He missed the last two seasons due to injury but appears to be on track to return to the court this season. His playmaking ability and defensive prowess could be what the team needs to stay competitive. Zach LaVine is a player to watch this season. The Bulls tried to trade him but couldn't find any suitors. He's coming off a down year where he only played 25 games and averaged 19.5 ppg. Head coach Billy Donovan should start feeling some pressure as he's been with the Bulls for four seasons now and has just one winning record. This is an important year for the Bulls as anything short of a playoff series win may lead to some sweeping changes by the organization.

Cleveland Cavaliers

The Cleveland Cavaliers were one of the most disappointing teams in the NBA last season. For the second year in a row, the team had an early playoff exit despite being loaded with talent. This led to head coach J.B. Bickerstaff being replaced by Kenny Atkinson. The core of Donovan Mitchell, Darius Garland, Evan Mobley and Jarrett Allen is as good as it gets but the team didn't make a lot of big moves this offseason. Plus, there were rumors that Garland would want a trade if Mitchell was still on the team this season. Well, the Cavaliers extended Mitchell's contract so he's not going anywhere. Garland is still on the team but could be on the move if things get rocky. There's just so much talent here and Mitchell is still a great player after averaging a 26.6 ppg last season. The Cavaliers have the pieces to be one of the top seeds in the Eastern Conference this season. However, they still don't feel like true title contenders yet. Perhaps that'll change if they're able to get a good return for Garland in a trade. They are young enough to where the 2024-25 season shouldn't be considered championship-or-bust, but they do need to make a deeper playoff run to show improvement.

Dallas Mavericks

The Dallas Mavericks were finally able to get to the NBA Finals last season after struggling to get over the hump for several seasons. However, they were totally outclassed by the Celtics and lost the series 4-1. While last season ended in disappointment, there are reasons to be excited about the Mavericks. As long as Luka Doncic is on the team, Dallas is going to be formidable. The team added Klay Thompson this offseason, which should help their offense but may not do much for their defense. As skilled as Doncic and Kyrie Irving are on the offensive side of the court, they are both liabilities on defense. Thompson is also not nearly the defender he once was. That said, the Mavericks should be title contenders once again this season. They have too much offensive firepower to be counted out against any opponent. Doncic is an excellent playoff performer but was banged up during the NBA Finals. If he can stay healthy, the Mavericks could come out of the West again but the path may be more difficult. The good news for Dallas is that Doncic is still young and as long as he's on the team, they should be title contenders.

Denver Nuggets

The Denver Nuggets were the favorites to repeat as NBA champions heading into the 2023-24 season, but couldn't get past the second round of the playoffs after losing to the Minnesota Timberwolves in seven. Nikola Jokic is still arguably the best player in the NBA after winning his third MVP and will likely be the favorite next season to win his fourth. However, there are reasons to be concerned about the Nuggets. Jamal Murray wasn't nearly as effective in this playoff run and seems to only play well against the Lakers. Also, the team's big free agent addition was Russell Westbrook. The last three teams that employed him didn't win a single playoff series while he was on the roster. The Nuggets also lost Kentavious Caldwell-Pope and Reggie Jackson in free agency without making any other major moves. Denver was anointed as the NBA's next dynasty far too early and they won't be the favorites to win the championship this season. Jokic is still elite but it doesn't feel like the Nuggets have the pieces around him to be a juggernaut this year. They may need to make a move before the trade deadline if they want to get back to the NBA Finals.

Detroit Pistons

The Detroit Pistons have one winning regular season record since the 2007-08 season and have been in a perpetual rebuild for over a decade. The team handed a $78.5 million contract to Monty Williams to take over as head coach only to fire him after one season. The Pistons were legendarily bad last season. They only won 14 games and set an NBA record by losing 28 straight games in a single season. However, things might actually be looking up. Williams is replaced by J.B. Bickerstaff, which doesn't seem like much of an upgrade considering he was just recently fired, but Trajan Langdon is now running the team's basketball operations and he did a good job beefing up the roster. Detroit added Tim Hardaway Jr., Tobias Harris, Malik Beasley and Simone Fontecchio. Those four players should give Cade Cunningham some real help. Will this be a playoff team? Almost certainly not, but they finally appear to be headed in the right direction. They'll be one of the teams that is in the Cooper Flagg sweepstakes and they could be one young superstar away from being an interesting team.

Golden State Warriors

The Golden State Warriors dynasty appears to officially be over. The team didn't even make the playoffs last season and they lost Klay Thompson and Chris Paul in free agency. The only big move they made all offseason was signing Buddy Hield. The Warriors were involved with a number of big-name players. They tried to trade for Paul George and Lauri Markkanen but those deals never came to fruition. The good news is that Stephen Curry signed a contract extension this offseason so he won't be going anywhere. The problem is that this team likely isn't going to be very good. The Warriors could still be a playoff team if they stay healthy and Curry gives them a chance in any game. That said, it's hard to see them as realistic title contenders this year. They are one team that could potentially be active at the trade deadline if any big names are to become available. If not, it's hard to see this current roster realistically competing against the best teams in the Western Conference. The Warriors had one of the greatest runs in NBA history but unless they're able to add some serious talent, their ceiling is likely an early playoff exit.

Houston Rockets

The Houston Rockets had a baffling offseason last year. They hired controversial former Boston Celtics head coach Ime Udoka and decided to go on a spending spree in free agency. They gave massive contracts to veterans Dillon Brooks and Fred VanFleet, who are both good players but are lackluster 3-point shooters. It didn't lead to a huge boost in wins as they finished as the 11th in the Western Conference. Still, that was a big improvement for Houston as they were the 14th seed in 2022-23. The team didn't make any big moves and the most notable additions were Reed Sheppard, AJ Griffin and Aaron Holiday. None of those players are enough to move the needle for a playoff team. However, the pieces are there for this team to be competitive. Competing for a spot in the play-in tournament is a realistic goal but actually getting into the playoffs will take a leap from Jalen Green, who had some big performances late in the season. The good news for the Rockets is that they're heading in the right direction and Ime Udoka is a good coach. They won't be contenders in 2024-25 but they have a chance to make the playoffs for the first time in five seasons.

Indiana Pacers

The Indiana Pacers were one of the best stories of the 2023-24 season. Heading into the year, they had missed the playoffs three-straight times. Despite that, they had some good pieces who all played well last season. The Pacers finished as the sixth seed in the Eastern Conference and made it all the way to the Conference Finals. They were swept by the Celtics but it was impressive they even made it that far. Indiana was able to keep much of its roster together by re-signing Pascal Siakam and Obi Toppin. Tyrese Haliburton is the best player on the team lead the NBA in assists last season. Rick Carlisle is a championship-winning head coach and has this team heading in the right direction. The Pacers could be sleeper championship contenders this season. They already made the Eastern Conference last season and should only be better now that the roster has been together for some time. Now, the East should be better this season if some superstar players like Joel Embiid and Giannis Antetokounmpo stay healthy. The Pacers may take a step back and not make it as deep into the playoffs but they should be in the mix at the end of the year.

Los Angeles Clippers

Will this finally be the year the Los Angeles Clippers stay healthy and make a run? You could ask the question for the last several seasons. It remains to be seen if this will finally be their year. Kawhi Leonard was excellent last season and played in 68 games so he proved he can be a bit more durable. The Clippers had a major loss this offseason with perennial All-Star Paul George signing with the 76ers. That's a massive loss for this team and likely kills their chances of winning a title this season. They do have a great head coach in Ty Lue and some good pieces on the roster. James Harden may be more productive now that he's the definitive No. 2 option. However, there's no reason to believe that the Clippers can stay healthy for an entire season and then an entire playoff run. If this season ends in the same the last five have, it could be time to shake things up in Los Angeles. There's a lot riding on this season for the Clippers. Another disappointing season could lead to sweeping changes and Leonard's future may need to come into question.

Los Angeles Lakers

Similar to the Warriors, the Lakers were linked to a lot of big names this offseason but weren't able to make any notable additions. The biggest move the team made was hiring J.J. Redick as head coach. He has no experience coaching in the NBA so it's impossible to know how he might look. Outside of that, the Lakers still have two of the best players in the world in Anthony Davis and LeBron James. Austin Reaves, D'Angelo Russell, Rui Hachimura and Jarred Vanderbilt all remain in Los Angeles. The only major additions the team made were rookies

Dalton Knecht and Bronny James. Knecht could be in the rotation this season but Bronny isn't likely to make an impact. The Lakers got knocked out in the first-round of the playoffs and didn't make big roster changes. It's difficult to see how they could be much better unless Redick ends up being a massive hit. Los Angeles will almost certainly be looking to make some changes before the trade deadline but it remains to be seen which players will be available. Barring some roster changes, the Lakers will have a hard time competing this season.

Memphis Grizzlies

The Memphis Grizzlies continue to be one of the most frustrating teams in the NBA. They had two great seasons prior to 2023-24 but it was derailed by a season-ending injury from Ja Morant. After three straight playoff appearances, the Grizzlies finished as the 13th seed in the Western Conference. They're bringing back much of the same roster with rookie Zach Edey being the only major addition. The good news is that Morant has stayed out of trouble and appears to be focused on basketball. Despite the rough 2023-24 season, the Grizzlies have a lot of young talent.

Much of what happens going season will depend on Morant. He needs to stay healthy and out of trouble or the Grizzlies will miss the playoffs again. If they can stay healthy, the Grizzlies should be very competitive. Morant is still one of the most talented young players in the NBA and Marcus Smart, Desmond Bane and Jaren Jackson Jr. are solid running mates.

Memphis likely won't be title contenders this season as they don't have a true star next to Morant. They're likely a piece or two away from making a big leap but they'll be in the playoff mix this season.

Miami Heat

Last season, the Miami Heat weren't able to make any magic happen. After making the NBA Finals during the 2022-23 season, the team got knocked out in the first round of the playoffs by the Celtics. A big reason for that was the health of Jimmy Butler. He didn't play a single game in the playoffs. At this point, it's difficult to buy into the Heat. The team will be competitive as long as they have Butler and Bam Adebayo, but Miami needs more pieces around them if they really hope to compete with the best in the Eastern Conference again. It's paramount that this team tries to swing a big trade either before or during the season. There are star players who become available every season so there should be options for Miami. If they can add another star, they'll be in the mix to win it all in 2024-25. As of now, their ceiling is an early playoff exit. They didn't make any substantial moves this offseason and it seems like they're always linked to star players but never pull the trigger on deals. Butler's playoff ability and Erik Spoelstra can only take the team so far. Pat Riley is a respected basketball mind but he's failed to put together a good roster for a few years now.

Milwaukee Bucks

The Milwaukee Bucks were among the favorites to win the title but were derailed by injuries. Giannis Antetokounmpo missed their entire first-round playoff series against the Pacers and the team got knocked out as a result. The Bucks will now be led by Doc Rivers after firing Adrian Griffin during the season. Giannis is still a force and the only player whom you could make a realistic argument for best player in the NBA over Nikola Jokic. He averaged a career-high 30.4 ppg last season. Regardless of accolades, he's still one of the best defensive players in the NBA. Damian Lillard proved to still be an impact player last season and averaged 24.3 ppg, but the loss of Jrue Holiday was felt. The team couldn't replace his perimeter defense. The Bucks still have enough pieces to win the Eastern Conference and make it to the NBA Finals, but two of their best players are in their 30s and Giannis couldn't stay healthy last season so they will need some injury luck in 2024-25. Basically, the entire season hinges on the health of Giannis. If he's good to go, the ceiling is another championship win.

Minnesota Timberwolves

The Minnesota Timberwolves were one of the biggest surprises in the NBA last season. After getting knocked out in the first round of the playoffs in 2022-23, they made it all the way to the Western Conference Finals last season and knocked out the Nuggets to get there. They weren't able to beat the Mavericks to get to the NBA Finals but the future is very bright. Anthony Edwards is the next big NBA superstar, Karl-Anthony Towns is a four-time All-Star and Rudy Gobert won his fourth NBA Defensive Player of the Year award. Their roster is more or less the same as they didn't make any big moves this offseason, but they did make some changes. Rob Dillingham, Terrence Shannon Jr. and Joe Ingles join the roster and expectations are high in Minnesota. This is officially Edwards' team after his incredible playoff performance last season and the next step for him is to get to a championship. They should be among the favorites to come out of the West this season. They still have their best pieces and the team seems to get along well. Minnesota might have something special brewing if they can take the next step in 2024-25.

New Orleans Pelicans

The New Orleans Pelicans were able to get back into the playoffs last season but Zion Williamson got hurt, which resulted in the team getting swept in the first round by the Thunder. Though they were solid in 2023-24, the Pelicans made a lot of changes this offseason. Gone are Dyson Daniels, Larry Nance Jr., E.J. Liddell, Cody Zeller, Naji Marshall and Jonas Valanciunas. There also seems to be a good chance Brandon Ingram could be traded at some point during the season. The only notable New Orleans addition was All-Star guard Dejounte Murray. He should have a pretty big impact on the team.

New Orleans has a lot of potential but so much is riding on Zion's health. He's a generational talent on the court but his health and weight are major concerns. He looked amazing toward the end of the season and almost single-handedly beat the Lakers in the play-in tournament before an injury knocked him out of the game and the rest of the playoffs. The Pelicans could be a scary team if they're healthy. They have a lot of talent and Zion has proven he can take over a game when he needs to. If there's any team that could make a leap from fringe playoff team to contender this season, it's the Pelicans.

New York Knicks

The New York Knicks have to be feeling really excited about this season. They have been searching for a long-term face of the franchise for years and may have found it in Jalen Brunson. He was a bonafide MVP candidate last season and put together a legendary playoff run before getting injured. Instead of standing pat, the Knicks decided to swing a big trade and added Mikal Bridges. He'll help add a major defensive presence while also being a dependable third or fourth-scoring option. One thing they need to figure out is what to do with Julius Randle. He's been very good for the Knicks but he missed the playoff run with an injury and they seemed fine without him. He'll likely be dangled on the trade market but it remains to be seen what they could get for him. The only real concern with the Knicks is if they can stay healthy for a deep playoff run. In the past, the Knicks have tried to take shortcuts in their rebuilds by adding aging stars. They have taken a smarter approach in recent years, which appears to be paying off. They'll be in the playoffs this season if they can stay healthy and have to be considered one of the favorites to come out of the East.

Oklahoma City Thunder

After seemingly being in a perpetual rebuild for years, the Oklahoma City Thunder finally put it all together in 2023-24. They finished as the No. 1 seed in the Western Conference but couldn't get past the Mavericks in the second round of the playoffs. Shai Gilgeous-Alexander is officially one of the best players in the NBA and finished second in MVP voting. He should only get better and so should many of the pieces on the Thunder. They are one of the most exciting teams in the NBA and might be the best in the Western Conference. All of their best pieces from last season like Gilgeous-Alexander, Chet Holmgren and Jalen Williams are all still very young. Plus, they added Alex Caruso and Isaiah Hartenstein this offseason. They've got plenty of offensive firepower and now have a couple of solid defensive stoppers. This is one of the best rosters in the NBA and the only thing that's going to hold them back is youth. This is why Caruso is such a big addition. He's a championship-winning player who knows how to win in the playoffs. The Thunder may end up being the favorites to win the Western Conference over the Mavericks and Nuggets. The thing that really has to have fans excited is that the Thunder are really just starting to scratch the surface of how good they can be.

Orlando Magic

The Orlando Magic are a team on the rise. They improved their win total to 47 games in 2023-24 after winning just 34 games the season before. They finished as the fifth seed in the Eastern Conference but narrowly lost to the Cavaliers in the first round of the playoffs in a seven-game series. The team is led by three young players Paolo Banchero, Franz Wagner and Jalen Suggs. Banchero is quickly becoming one of the best players in the NBA. He made his first All-Star game last season and averaged a career-high 22.6 ppg. This is a very young roster but they were able to bring in veteran guard Kentavious Caldwell-Pope, who is a two-time champion. His experience should really help a young Magic roster. Orlando still feels like a team that's a year or two away from really competing. Banchero is the only true star on the roster and they likely need another one to compete with the East's best. Luckily, they are finally headed in the right direction after years in limbo. They should be in the playoffs again and there are a lot of teams that won't want to face them.

Philadelphia 76ers

Another season, another disappointing end for the Philadelphia 76ers. The team has not made a Conference Finals since the 2000-01 season despite having a lot of good rosters over the years. However, this could finally be the year they get over the hump. Last season was derailed by former MVP Joel Embiid missing most of the year with an injury. While he came back in time for the playoffs, he clearly wasn't the same player. The team decided to go all-in and signed Paul George to a huge contract. That's not to mention that they also added Caleb Martin, Andre Drummond and Eric Gordon. Nick Nurse is a very good coach and should get a lot out of this roster. The 76ers have reached the point where anything less than an NBA Finals appearance is a massive disappointment. They were able to lock up Embiid on a three-year contract extension this offseason so they shouldn't have much drama lingering over the team. This is their year to make it happen and they're less reliant on Embiid. George and Tyrese Maxey are good enough to win a lot of games if the former MVP needs to miss time. However, they aren't winning a championship unless the star big man is healthy. That's something he's never proven he can consistently do.

Phoenix Suns

It was another offseason of change for the Phoenix Suns. Frank Vogel lasted just one season before getting fired. The trio of Kevin Durant, Devin Booker and Bradley Beal wasn't as successful as they had hoped. They did finish as the sixth seed in the Western Conference and made the playoffs but were swept by the Timberwolves in the first round. Mike Budenholzer is the new head coach but it's hard to see how he's much of an upgrade over Vogel. The Suns also didn't do much to shake up the roster. Once again, the Suns are the boom-or-bust team of the 2024-25 season. They could run through the league with their talented trio or they could fall apart due to their lack of depth and have an early playoff exit again. At the very least, they will be fun to watch when they're healthy. Nobody can totally count out Phoenix. Durant and Booker are still elite while Beal can't be worse than he was last season. That said, the Western Conference is simply too good to expect the Suns to go on a deep playoff run. There are young, better and more athletic teams all over the Conference. The Suns do take big swings so it's possible they'll be a roster shake-up at some point but until that happens, it's hard to buy into what they're doing.

Portland Trail Blazers

The Portland Trail Blazers' first season in over a decade without Damian Lillard went about as expected. They only won 21 games and finished as the 15th seed in the Western Conference. Portland made very few moves this offseason and there's not much they can do to improve. This is going to be another rebuilding year and the Trail Blazers are likely the worst team in the Western Conference. Former No. 3 pick Scoot Henderson was highly touted coming out of college but he didn't do much as a rookie and only averaged 14.0 ppg. Portland's only chance of being competitive this season is if he takes a big leap in Year 2. Anfernee Simons is also a building block after he scored a career-high 22.6 ppg last season. While there are some promising pieces in place, the Trail Blazers simply aren't very good. They don't have a proven star on the squad. The goal for the Trail Blazers this season is to continue developing young players and getting the highest draft pick they can possibly get. Chauncey Billups has to be feeling the pressure this season and could be on the hot seat if the team doesn't show major improvement.

Sacramento Kings

After 2022-23, it looked like the Sacramento Kings were finally out of the NBA's basement. While they finished with a 46-36 record last season, they lost in the play-in tournament and missed the playoffs altogether. That said, they retooled this offseason and could be in for a big year. They added key pieces in DeMar DeRozan and Jaden McDaniels, who should both make an instant impact. De'Aaron Fox had another incredible year and averaged 26.6 ppg while Domantas Sabonis is still playing at a high level. Mike Brown appears to be the right coach for the Kings and got a three-year extension this offseason. The problem with this team is that they aren't great defensively and DeRozan doesn't help that. Everybody knows this team can score with the best of them but that doesn't matter if they also can't stop anybody. The Kings will be in the playoff mix again this season but they don't have enough defensive talent to guarantee a playoff spot. Sacramento could be active at the trade deadline and they will be very competitive. The real test is if they can get past the first round of the playoffs for the first time since 2003-04.

San Antonio Spurs

The San Antonio Spurs were one of the first teams in the NBA last season and only won 22 games. However, many would say last year was a resounding success. Why is that? Victor Wembanyama might be even better than what everybody thought. The French phenom was incredible as a rookie. He was named First-Team All-Defense, was second in Defensive Player of the Year voting and was named Rookie of the Year. But that's not the most exciting thing. What has to have the Spurs particularly excited about is that he played in 71 games. The biggest concern with him is whether or not he was going to be able to stay healthy. He proved that he can and the sky's the limit for how great he can be. With that in mind, the Spurs could make the biggest leap of any team this season. San Antonio's roster still isn't great. They did add Chris Paul and Harrison Barnes, who should help, but they don't move the needle a ton. The only reason to believe in the Spurs is Wembanyama. If he takes a big leap in Year 2, San Antonio is going to be much harder to beat. It's possible that he's widely considered a top-five player in the NBA next season. While the playoffs still seem like a pipe dream, the Spurs will no longer be NBA bottom-feeders whenever Wembanyama is on the court.

Toronto Raptors

The Toronto Raptors are one of the NBA's rebuilding teams. During the season, they traded away their best player Pascal Siakam and there isn't really much to be excited about. Scottie Barnes and Immanuel Quickley are good players who are getting paid like superstars, which is rarely a recipe for success. The Raptors replaced Nick Nurse, who is a championship-winning coach, with Darko Rajaković, who had never been a head coach at the NBA level before and it showed. There were some growing pains for him in his first year and those could continue in Year 2.

The Raptors are one of the teams who should be looking to the draft in 2025 as they won't be overly competitive in 2024-25. Luckily, they have Masai Ujiri running the basketball operations and he's a very strong personnel man. He mortgaged a lot to get Kawhi Leonard and that won the franchise a championship but set them back several years. Toronto likely should've started rebuilding after Kawhi left but now they're finally embracing a reset. While they aren't making the playoffs this season, it'll just take one good offseason for them to get back into the mix.

Utah Jazz

The Utah Jazz were rumored to be trading Lauri Markkanen all offseason but decided to extend him instead. That shows that they aren't totally embracing a rebuild but it's hard to see how they win with this roster. Head coach Will Hardy looks like the real deal and could have something good building in Utah. That said, this is a rebuild and they may be a year or two away from being a playoff team again. Markkanen is great and averaged 23.2 ppg last season. The Jazz added Drew Eubanks in free agency but didn't make many other moves of note. There are some reasons to like the Jazz this season. They have a really good young coach, an emerging young star and a dependable veteran guard in Jordan Clarkson. However, the Western Conference is stacked with really good teams heading into 2024-54. The Jazz will be in the mix for a spot in the play-in tournament but it's hard to imagine them competing for one of the top-six seeds. Luckily, the future is looking really good after the team was in limbo for years with Donovan Mitchell and Rudy Gobert. Their new core of players features much less drama but they still need a bonafide superstar to compete in a very challenging Western Conference.

Washington Wizards

The Washington Wizards might be the team best equipped to challenge the Nets for the worst record in the NBA in 2024-25. After years of putting it off, the team finally traded away the face of the franchise Bradley Beal. That predictably made them much worse as they only won 15 games in 2023-24. Washington hasn't won a playoff series since 2017 and is currently in a total rebuild. There's no reason to believe this team can surprise and play well this season. When Kyle Kuzma and Jordan Poole are your best players, you aren't going to win a lot of games. Kuzma is coming off the best year of his career where he averaged 22.2 ppg. Poole is a liability on defense and he wasn't a very good scorer last season. He might have the worst contract in the NBA. The biggest goal for the Wizards this season is to try and secure a top draft pick so that the rebuild can get off to a good start. Cooper Flagg might be the only player who can save this mess and it's hard to imagine Kuzma will be on the roster at the end of the season. The Wizards might be good again someday but that day isn't coming anytime soon.
